Nine Students from Nepal got Selected for AWS Educate Student Ambassador 2020 Cohort

By AVASH SWAR — May 1, 2020  2 Comments

Amazon Web Services (AWS) today announced its inaugural AWS Educate Student Ambassador 2020 Cohort in which nine students from Nepal are selected. The program facilitates students from around the globe to acquire valuable on-hand experience as well as spread their technical knowledge to others to develop the cloud culture. Previously, five faculties from Nepal also made the list of Faculty Cloud Ambassadors 2020 by AWS.

What is the AWS Educate Student Ambassador Program?

The AWS Educate Student Ambassador Program gives AWS Educate student members recognition, access to career development opportunities, and other benefits for helping their peers learn about AWS Educate. The program is available to AWS Educate student members globally ages 18+ who are enrolled at a public or private school, college, or university.

The application period for the 2020 cohort of the AWS Educate Student Ambassador Program is now closed. Stay tuned for updates and check the AWS Educate student portal regularly for more details on next year's application cycle.

The efforts of Genese in Cloud Computing Services

Well, it is not easy to get selected as an AWS Educate Student Ambassador. The selection takes place annually with only a limited number of students making the cut. There are a large number of applicants from different parts of the world. The students have to take part in a highly competitive selection process. Therefore, the work of Genese Cloud Academy is worth mentioning here. From getting them onboard to conducting sessions and training them, Genese had a vital role. Of course, it wouldn't be possible without the efforts of the individuals but Genese put in the act of a mentor.
